RCMP foil B.C. terror plot

Suspects. John Stewart Nuttall, born in 1974, and Amanda Marie Korody, born in 1983, have both been charged

Two Canadian-born citizens have been arrested and charged in what the RCMP described as an al-Qaida-inspired plot to blow up the British Columbia legislature on Canada Day.

Officials with the force announced the allegations Tuesday, as they displayed photos of alleged pressure-cooker bombs reminiscent of the deadly Boston Marathon bombings.

John Stewart Nuttall, born in 1974, and Amanda Marie Korody, born in 1983, were each charged with knowingly facilitating a terrorist activity, making or possessing an explosive device, and conspiracy.

They were arrested in Abbotsford on Monday, the RCMP said. The two made a brief appearance in court Tuesday and the case was put over until July 9.

Assistant Commissioner Wayne Rideout said the charges involved a "domestic threat" to target Canada Day festivities on the grounds of the provincial legislature in Victoria. There were no links to international organizations, said Rideout.

"This self-radicalized behaviour was intended to create maximum impact and harm to Canadian citizens at the B.C. legislature on a national holiday," Rideout told a news conference in Surrey.

"They took steps to educate themselves and produce explosive devices designed to cause injury and death.... They discussed a wide variety of targets and techniques."

The RCMP revealed little about the suspects and their background or what may have motivated the alleged conspiracy, other than repeatedly saying the plot was linked to an

"al-Qaida ideology."

When asked whether the plot had a religious motive or was instead driven by something else, Assistant Commissioner James Malizia sidestepped the question.

"When I refer to radicalized or self-radicalized, it is radicalized to violence, so taking violent acts with a specific ideology in place," said Malizia.

"In this case here, the ideology had to do with a criminal act, wanting to pursue a criminal act on behalf of an organization that they believed in, and that organization and the ideology behind that organization as you know it is the al-Qaida ideology."

The RCMP said the force has been following the suspects' activities for months and said investigators ensured the alleged bombs were harmless.

Beyond that, the force declined to comment on the specifics of its investigation, such as whether officers had infiltrated the plot.

Western LRT plan. Coun. Egli stands firm on proposal

The city's preferred westward light-rail expansion is a "reasonable proposal," according to transportation committee chair Coun. Keith Egli.

Egli was responding to a list of four demands announced by the federal National Capital Commission's board on Friday.

"I believe we have a reasonable proposal and a reasonable budget on the table taking into account other transit options to the south and east that the City needs to consider," Egli said in an email response on Tuesday.

The proposed light-rail transit-line extension would run along 1.2 kilometres of the Crown corporation's property near the Sir John A. Macdonald Parkway. Any project there needs the NCC's signoff to go ahead.

After responding to concerns about the above-ground route from residents living near the site, Ottawa City Hall returned mid-June with a plan to partially bury 700 metres of the track.

"The $80 million in enhancements included in the latest proposal responds to concerns raised by residents and the NCC related to access, noise, visual impact and safety," said Egli.

The NCC's board voted that any proposal the city comes back with must consider covering the entire length of the 1.2-km stretch, and include provisions that allow NCC staff to include "any other mitigation measures deemed essential ... to the NCC Board" that would ensure "unimpeded access to the corridor lands and the shorelines of the Ottawa River," and "minimal visual impact on the corridor landscape."

Only 5 out of 20 reported sex assaults on Transpo resulted in charges in 2012

One-quarter of reported sexual assaults on the OC Transpo system in 2012 resulted in the laying of charges, according to the Ottawa police.

Just five charges were laid last year in relation to 20 reported sexual assaults. The low number could be attributed to a number of factors, including people who opt not to press charges but wish to inform police anyway. Incidents that took place one year could also result in charges the following year.

But there are also barriers to these police investigations, according to Ottawa Police Service's Staff Sgt. Angela McDade. Chief among them: the difficulty in identifying the perpetrator.

"A lot of the victims don't see or can't remember detailed descriptions of the offender," said McDade, who heads up OPS's sexual assault and child abuse section.

"You're on a bus, it happens so quickly, and by the time they realize what's happened, they're not sitting there taking down a description, and then the individual is gone. And there isn't video surveillance, et cetera."

The city's transit commission recently agreed to phase in cameras across the entire fleet, including new O-Train vehicles. The new light-rail line will also be outfitted.

Cameras will be slowly introduced to the fleet as new buses are purchased. That's likely to take some time, however — OC Transpo has one of the newest fleets in the country.

Cameras will likely be part of a 10-point safety plan OC Transpo intends to reveal later this month. Transportation committee chair Coun. Diane Deans told Metro last month that a public education campaign will be another part of the plan — something women's advocacy groups have long been calling for.

joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Ottawa police say foul play has not been ruled out of the investigation of a man in his early 30s who died after falling six storeys from a Clarence Street apartment building early Tuesday morning.

Police received a 911 call at 4:40 a.m. and responded to the 200 block of Clarence Street between King Edward Avenue and Cumberland Street.

The man suffered life-threatening injuries and was pronounced dead in hospital. A post-mortem examination is expected to happen in the coming days.

Police said that the family has been notified and has asked that the victim not be identified. Several witnesses are being interviewed by police as they continue their investigation.

Around 2 p.m. Tuesday a distraught woman and her father emerged from an apartment building at 215 Clarence St.

They didn't give their names, but the father said his daughter attended a party with the victim, whom she knew, on Monday night.

Details from the police were scant Tuesday evening. A police spokeswoman confirmed that there were several witnesses still to be interviewed in relation to the man's death, but could not confirm either the address of the apartment building or that the man was attending a party at the time of the incident.

An Ottawa police cruiser could be seen parked outside the apartment building across the street Tuesday afternoon.

A man who spoke to Metro on Tuesday said his daughter attended a party in this apartment building on Monday and that a man who fell to his death from a sixth-floor balcony was also present. JOE LOFARO/METRO

OPL. Workshops pitch camping to new Canadians

In an effort to create a new generation of outdoorsmen, a series of workshops at the Ottawa Public Library aims to teach Canadian newcomers the ins and outs of camping.

"We were hoping that we could attract newcomers to Canada who hadn't camped in their countries of origin," said Dorothy Jeffreys, the co-ordinator of lifelong-learning and literacy at OPL, which will host four Learn to Camp sessions by Ontario Parks from July 9 to 25.

"Last year there was a really good response. Many were young married couples with families who wanted to start," said Jeffreys, pointing out Ontario has more than 300 provincial and federal parks.

Five ridings. Wynne to call Aug. 1 byelections: Sources

Voters in five Ontario ridings will get a chance to pass judgment on rookie Premier Kathleen Wynne and her stewardship of the governing Liberal party in byelections to be held Thursday, Aug. 1.

The byelections in Windsor, London, Ottawa and two Toronto-area ridings were triggered by the resignations of five Liberals since Wynne took over as premier in February, including former premier Dalton McGuinty.

Wynne will call all five byelections Wednesday, Liberal sources said, even though she could wait until December to call the votes in Ottawa-South, Scarborough-Guildwood and Etobicoke-Lakeshore.

It's an "unusually large number of byelections" to be held all at one time, especially when people often use such opportunities for protest votes against governments, said associate professor of politics Bryan Evans of Ryerson University in Toronto.

"Byelections are an opportunity to punish a government but not defeat it, and come the general election, vote for that government if it is deemed better than the alternatives," Evans said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Women removed from Ottawa Mission program over safety fears

graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

Up until June 20, opiate addict Crystal O'Hara says, she was on the road to recovery at the Ottawa Mission's Day Program for people struggling with addiction.

But O'Hara is no longer at the Mission — she was asked to leave due to safety concerns, being one of the only women in a predominantly male program.

"I'm 30. All my life I've been an addict. I'm trying to get help," said O'Hara.

O'Hara said she had been clean and sober with the group for four months after starting treatment in mid-March.

"I've used since I left. I'm going through a depression right now," said O'Hara.

O'Hara was handed a letter saying that the program once available to men and women would no longer accept females.

"They told us not to judge others. They went back on their word by judging me just because I'm a woman."

Not so, according to Brooke

Eagle, the Mission's manager of addictions service, who said that a change in allowing women in the group has been a long time coming.

"We recognize that changing it does have an impact on women's access to services," she said. "Yet as the person who manages this, I don't think we can offer a safe place for women."

Many members of the group are doing drugs on the street, said Eagle. "One dynamic is that men in the group have often victimized women in the program," she said. Meetings regularly attract upwards of 35 men and only one or two women.

Addiction affects women's bodies differently and they have a host of other concerns that are gender-specific, Eagle added. The Mission has offered O'Hara one-on-one and group support with a female addictions counsellor and the Amethyst Women's Addiction Centre.

Still, O'Hara said that she felt comfortable in the group unlike others she had joined. "I was fine with all the guys," she said, pointing out that it gave her a routine and a place to go from 9 to 10:30 a.m. every day.

"I don't like women at all. My mother beat me from age six to the time that I left home. It's hard to get over trauma. Morphine helped. It stopped the nightmares."

Province hopes for more takers on smart-grid funding

Ontario Energy Minister Bob Chiarelli announced Tuesday nearly $36 million is up for grabs for the second phase of funding for provincially based projects that will strengthen the smart-grid electrical system.

The $50-million Smart Grid Fund was launched in 2011, but since then only $14.1 million has been handed out to nine projects, which have created more than 600 jobs.

The funds are supposed to go to projects that either develop or test smart-grid technology, such as "smart" thermostats.

Chiarelli maintained that one of the reasons why the entire fund hasn't been gobbled up yet is because of the "tough restrictions" that applicants must meet.

"It has to have a fairly significant level of advancement so that it can be used as a pilot project or as a demonstration project ... for example, with Ontario Power Generation or Hydro One," said Chiarelli. "We've got much more interest and take-up this year than we did last year."

The provincial government touts smart-grid technology as the "next generation" of power distribution because it is said to be more sustainable, helps reduce greenhouse-gas emissions, and gives consumers more control over their power consumption.

Applicants have until Sept. 6 to apply for the funding.

The fate of Egypt's first democratically elected president hung in the balance Tuesday, hours before a deadline to yield to the demands of millions of protesters or see the military suspend the constitution, disband parliament and install a new leadership.

Embattled Islamist President Mohammed Morsi vowed not to resign, however, and he demanded that the powerful armed forces withdraw their ultimatum, saying he rejected all "dictates" — from home or abroad.

In a speech to the nation, he pledged to protect his "constitutional legitimacy" with his life and accused loyalists of his autocratic predecessor Hosni Mubarak of riding the current wave of protests to topple his regime.

Morsi, who at times angrily raised his voice, thrust his fist in the air and pounded the podium, warned that electoral and constitutional legitimacy "is the only guarantee against violence."

Morsi's defiant statement sets up a major confrontation between his Islamist supporters and Egyptians angry over what they see as his efforts to impose control by his Muslim Brotherhood as well as his failure to introduce reforms more than two years after the Arab Spring revolution.

His opponents say that he has lost his legitimacy through mistakes and power grabs and that their turnout on the streets shows the nation has turned against him.

ians, who say that corruption, lawlessness, and the impunity of government officials and their wealthy friends have increased markedly since President Viktor Yanukovich came to power three years ago.

It has also prompted an outcry among opposition lawmakers.

Officials finally caved in to public pressure and detained the officer late Tuesday, according to an Interior Ministry spokesman. A court was to decide whether to keep him under arrest or to release him on bail or a pledge not to leave his place of residence.

The victim, a 29-year-old local woman, was returning home from a bar last Wednesday when she says she was shoved into a car, driven to the woods, raped and savagely beaten by two policemen, aided by a driver. The woman remains in the hospital in serious condition, having sustained multiple fractures to her skull and bruises all over her body.

One of the suspected police officers and the alleged driver of the vehicle were detained earlier, but officials were reluctant to apprehend the second suspected policeman, who claims he was on duty at the local police headquarters when the crime happened.

U.S. dollar remains top dog of reserve currencies, while euro loses its lustre

2012 report. European debt crisis discouraged central banks from using euro for reserves

International use of the euro slipped last year because of the debt crisis in Europe, but the U.S. dollar held its own as the world's leading currency for reserves held by central banks.

Currencies not traditionally used as reserves, such as the Canadian and Australian dollars, gained in favour as those countries enjoyed steady growth and lower debt than major economies.

The European Central Bank (ECB) said Tuesday that the euro's share among the currency reserves held globally by central banks fell to 23.9 per cent in 2012 from 25.1 per cent the previous year. The dollar's share was little changed at 61.9 per cent.

The ECB said the financial crisis afflicting the 17-country eurozone was a factor discouraging use of the euro for reserves, which are often held in the form of government bonds. Lending across borders in the eurozone has dropped, diminishing the liquidity that reserve holders like to see. Lower liquidity means there are fewer buyers and sellers readily found.

The eurozone countries have struggled with heavy levels of public debt — Greece, Portugal, Ireland and Cyprus have needed financial rescue and even large economies like Spain and Italy have worryingly high debt. Concern over that debt eased only after the European Central Bank came up with a plan to buy the government bonds issued by countries that promise to reform.

In its annual report on international use of the euro, the ECB also found that there was less borrowing in euros internationally by companies.

Exchange rates

Why hold reserves?

Countries hold reserves of foreign currency so they can influence their own currencies' exchange rates in case they rise or fall too rapidly. They can do this by buying or selling currencies on foreign exchange markets.

The country issuing the reserve currency can benefit because demand from abroad supports its exchange rate and can mean lower borrowing costs for the government, as has been the case with the U.S. dollar in its role as the leading reserve currency.

Demand for dollars in the form of U.S. Treasury bonds by other countries — such as China — helps keep down the interest rate that the U.S. government pays to borrow. Money that is not spent on interest can be spent on other things, or saved.

HOW DID YOU NOT KNOW, JLO?

There are times when it's a good idea to look a gift horse in the mouth.

Such as over the weekend, when Jennifer Lopez was paid $1.5 million by the China National Petroleum Corp. for a one-night gig in Absurdistan, which included singing Happy Birthday to Gurbanguly Berdimuhamedow, the nation's beloved leader.

(Sorry, my mistake. Turkmenistan, not Absurdistan. I keep getting my 'stans' mixed up.)

If JLo or any of her people had spent five minutes on Google, they would have stayed home on the block, $1.5 million or no $1.5 million.

Perhaps distracted by all that jack, they all failed to notice that Turkmenistan is right down there on the human rights s-t list, along with several other 'stans' cut loose in the fall of the Soviet Union. Mikhail Gorbachev has a lot to answer for.

"What's the next stop on her tour, Syria?" snorted the director of the Human Rights Foundation, citing evidence that Turkmenistan is among the most oppressive nations on Earth.

Or maybe she spent most of her pre-show prep trying to figure out how to sing "Happy birthday, dear Gurbanguly" before channeling Marilyn Monroe and going with "Happy birthday Mr. President."

Whatever. She and her people completely missed the fact that Turketc. is among the world's 10 most censored regimes, according to Reporters Without Borders, and stands accused of a host of ethnic and political crimes including torture and murder.

Even worse, Berdimuhamedow is a real improvement over his predecessor Saparmurat Niyazov, who, according to the U.K.'s Guardian newspaper, built a giant gold statue of himself that rotates so his visage is always facing the sun, and changed the names of the months — one in honour of his mother, and the other the title of his book. Oh, and he built an ice palace in the desert.

See how easy it is to confuse this place with Absurdistan? But no problem for JLo, who bounced onto the stage, with the usual enthusiastic shout-out: "Turkmenistan!" As if it was Winnipeg or Edmonton. Wherever the private jet stops and the door opens.

So JLo, who, believe or not, "works" with Amnesty International, joins the Geopolitically Challenged Celebrity Hall of Fame, which already includes Beyoncé, Mariah Carey, 50 Cent, Usher and Hilary Swank.

Once they found out that they were playing footsies with the real-life equivalent of Jabba the Hutt, Beyoncé, Hilary et al., fell all over themselves to give the dirty money back. So far, JLo remains attached to the filthy lucre, probably waiting for the media to determine the extent of the transgression, which appears to fall somewhere between Alec Baldwin and the Q-word and Paula Deen and the N-word.

Meanwhile, boys and girls, the next time you're tempted to fall asleep in social studies, snap out of it. Pay attention in class and you could avoid ending up in your own private Absurdistan. Don't end up like JLo and get stuck with the 'Duh' word.

I think one must be absolutely cynically or completely daft to take partnerships developed in the Global South for the sake of alleviating poverty and hand them over to Canadian large corporations and mining companies which will end up exploiting their resources. Yet it is again the approach taken by the Harper government by recently amalgamating CIDA under the Department of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Development.

The Harper government is diverting Canadian development assistance for the poor to companies whose interests are opposite — in principle and practice — at the expense of the well-being of these poor people.

Mr. Harper knows the role played by multinationals in the impoverishment of several Third World countries. He is thus making another dangerous right turn in favour of the very rich, whose first victims, in the truest sense, will be the poorest of the world.

I hope pressures from the public, opposition parties and from members of their own party will force Harper Conservatives to change their mind towards CIDA and to adopt a much more human approach towards the poorest.

Jigga what? Jigga who? Jay-Z flipping the script

Music business.

The latest offering from Shawn Carter represents an overall change in the way music intends to do its future business

PAT HEALY

Metro World News

When Jay-Z put out The Blueprint 3 in September 2009, most of his fans had known about its arrival for the better part of a year. And in the months leading up to the release, the rapper would gradually share the title, track list, artwork and names of guest appearances to slowly and steadily amp up expectations for the album's eventual release.

Four years later and Jay-Z is using a totally different blueprint. Earlier this month, during the fifth game of the NBA Finals, he appeared in a commercial promoting Magna Carta Holy Grail, a brand new album that fans were hearing about for the first time, scheduled for release on the Fourth of July, less than a month after the announcement.

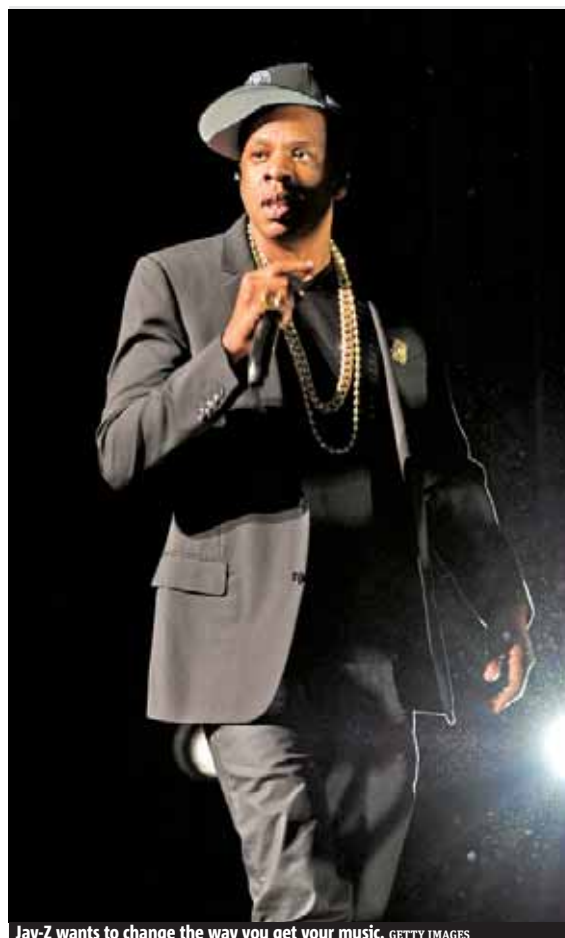

"The Internet is like the wild west," he says at one point during the three-minute spot. "We need to write the new rules."

It's part of an overall emerging trend.

"To be able to announce, 'This is now,' I see it as part of music marketing today that is on crack cocaine," says music industry veteran and author of the upcoming book, The Artist's Guide to Success in the Music Business, Loren Weisman. "Because if you're telling me it's coming in six months, I don't want to hear it."

Mike King, a former product manager at Rykodisc, who teaches music marketing courses at Berklee College of Music, says the sneak attack approach is not just due to the instant gratification of the Internet. It's also the personal nature of social media.

"If you look at the things that labels used to use to market music, like commercial radio and MTV, all of these places that labels used to spend their way into don't exist, but what does exist are these communities of hardcore fans," he says. "If you sneak it out to those people, they will be your absolute best ambassadors."

Steve Knopper, a contributing editor for Rolling Stone, and the author of Appetite for Self-Destruction: The Spectacular Crash of the Record Industry in the Digital Age, says perhaps the music business has almost come to a place of acceptance with today's consumer culture.

"In the record industry this wasn't really possible before," he says. "Ten or 15 years ago it wasn't possible at all technology-wise, because they couldn't rush out an album that quickly. And then, up until the last few years, nobody wanted to do it even if they could because they were so scared of the Internet. They were so scared that, 'If we release something too quickly and we don't have the whole thing completely under control then people are going to pirate this! But now it seems like no one cares. It's like, 'I have an album! Let's just get it out!'"

In the commercial for Magna Carta Holy Grail, Jay-Z shares his marketing strategy, and it doesn't sound much more complicated than the last clause that Knopper outlined.

"The idea is to really finish the album and drop it," he says, "giving it to the world

Not the only

Jay-Z is just one of a growing number of major artists this year writing new rules.

- Industry trend. In January, David Bowie broke a decade of musical silence with a cryptic video that appeared on YouTube on midnight of his 66th birthday. Then in March, he released The Next Day, a full-length album that reportedly not even all of the top brass at his publicity company knew about until just days before its arrival. And Kanye West only made fans aware of last week's release, Yeezus, when he tweeted about it at the beginning of May. What these albums share is secret hard work behind the scenes, with a rushed approach and artwork that appears to just be dashed off the night before. Bowie's album cover is just a white square covering the album jacket for his 1977 album, Heroes. West's album cover is just a picture of a compact disc with a piece of red duct tape on the case.

at one time and letting them share it."

This sneak attack approach isn't exactly brand new. Mash-up artist Gregg Gillis built up a big word-of-mouth following with the 2006 Girl Talk album, Night Ripper. For the two Girl Talk albums that followed — 2008's Feed the Animals and 2010's All Day — he just quietly leaked them online and watched the reaction spread across the worldwide web like wildfire.

"Everyone gets to hear it at the same time, before reading any reviews or forming any opinions," says Gillis. "I think it's worked out great for me in the past, but for future releases, I have been actively thinking about giving it some short advance notice. Doing it in a strategic way can be helpful for giving it proper context."

So does that mean we can expect a new sneak attack from Girl Talk soon? If we told you, it wouldn't really be a sneak attack, would it?

Teen mom turned porn star Farrah Abraham is checking into a rehab facility in Florida to deal with her drinking problem, Us Weekly reports. She'll spend 10 days at the Lukens Institute in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. "I'm 22 and I want to make better choices and ensure I can recognize when I am putting myself in a bad situation next time," said the "star," who within the past year has made a slew of good decisions, like driving under the influence (for which she got a DUI) and starring in a porno with James Deen. But don't think running away to Florida is going to solve your problem, Farrah. If anything, being in Florida (in a place other than Disney World, natch) is only going to want to make you hit the bottle harder.

Studdard joins The Biggest Loser

Almost a decade ago, Ruben Studdard sang to us that he was "sorry for 2004," and now it looks like he's also feeling a little sorry for packing on the pounds. Indeed, the second American Idol champ is set to join the weight-loss juggernaut this fall, People reports. Studdard says his previous attempts at curbing his obesity — he rang in at 455 pounds in 2006 — haven't gotten him very far before and that he's looking to get healthy so he lowers his risk for high blood pressure, diabetes and heart problems. We could easily make a fat joke about this, but we love Ruben. Godspeed, good sir! But please, if you can, try not to go the Jonah Hill route — we all know how that turned out. A little chunkiness is OK by us. As long as he still keeps on enough chunk fto keep referring to him as "the velvet teddy bear," we're good.

Kim's going stir crazy hiding from paparazzi

Poor, poor Kim Kardashian. The new mom to North West (that'll never get old) can't even leave the house to get her butt waxed because the paps will be all over her every move in the weeks following her baby's arrival.

We feel slightly bad for Kim — every time she steps outside she has to watch her back. Still, what is the big deal about being seen shortly after giving birth? Any new mom will tell you that sweatpants and yesterday's shirt (with spit-up on it) are perfectly acceptable attire, Kim.

Drake skips BET awards over feud with Chris Brown

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News in NYC

Drake was a no-show at this Sunday's BET Awards, despite being nominated for a whopping 12 trophies. What could induce someone to skip a party where people were going to say nice things about him all night?

He had a previous engagement on the high road.

Drake and Chris Brown can't stand each other, and according to Hollywood Life, Drake skipped the event to keep their feud from flaring up again. "The reason Drake isn't (at the BET Awards) is 100 per cent all about Chris Brown," a source said.

Good for Drake for trying to be the mature one. This is one feud where it's hard to root for them to make peace, though. Who would want to be on good terms with Chris Brown?

Despite his looks, talent, sex appeal, tons of cash and being known via just one name — a la Cher —Drake (Aubrey Drake Graham) isn't giving it up for just any old hussy who comes along.

"You know the way fighters don't f— before the fight? Sometimes I feel like I'm so focused on training my body and getting my mind right to create this album that sex isn't one of my main priorities," the rapper tells GQ in the July issue about his forthcoming album Nothing Was The Same. "If someone is around that I know and trust, I'm down. But I'm not going to end up with some stranger at this party."

Doing Disney World is no Mickey Mouse undertaking

Live and learn.

Metro's Elisha Dacey sums up what she learned about taking your family to one of the world's most famous theme parks

elisha.dacey@metronews.ca

Trying to sum up Walt Disney World in one short article is impossible. There are books, websites and industries around how to get through Disney World without throwing up, kiddo meltdowns, waiting in two-hour lines, third-degree sunburns or your feet turning into one giant blister.

So when my family and I got the chance to visit Disney World as part of Cityline's recent CityInDisney contest, I threw myself into research. Then I ignored most of it.

Here's what did work for us:

It's not all sunshine in Orlando

In fact, it rains nearly every day at some point then gets blisteringly hot again. Go to the dollar store and bring ponchos. I ignored this advice and ended up paying $21 for plastic Disney ponchos.

Bring Band-Aids

You'll need them for the blisters you develop when you wear those cute-but-ridiculous shoes that no one notices on the first day.

Ensure your visit to the Magic Kingdom doesn't lose its magic with some forward thinking. KENT PHILLIPS/DISNEY

Bring out your running shoes

And don't wear any other kind of shoes. Good thick socks that wick away sweat also help.

The best investment we made:

Reusable water bottles with filters. There are water fountains throughout the park, but they can be hard to find. And if you're picky about how water tastes, this is better than drinking (very expensive) bottled water.

The food isn't that expensive

I saw a lot of complaints about how expensive the food is on various websites, but that's because Americans are used to cheaper food prices. The food prices were on par for what you'd pay at Canadian restaurants.

However, the food is hit-and-miss

Some of the restaurants were great. Some were awful. Use websites like UrbanSpoon and TripAdvisor to do some research.

Use the hotel concierge's services

I had trouble making reservations at sit-down restaurants myself, due to Disney's finicky website. But my hotel concierge didn't. Use their services — it's free — to find reservations at the various parks.

Remember to nap

Go when the parks open, leave around 11 or 11:30 a.m., eat lunch then head back to the hotel for a two-hour nap. For everyone. This avoids the worst heat of the day and kid meltdowns.

Take a break

We spent eight days at Disney and seven days in the parks. That one day off we spent at the resort in the pool. Taking a break relaxed everyone.

Hug every character, even if you're not a hugger

You'll feel better.

Camping

Don't be afraid of the great outdoors

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Reluctant to rough it? You don't need to be an experienced adventurer to enjoy camping in Canada. For people who want to get a taste of our country's great outdoors, consider the following:

Check out Parks Canada's Learn to Camp programs:

They run throughout the summer at various national parks across the country and teach camping related skills like how to set up a tent or cook outside. Ontario Parks has its own version of Learn to Camp that includes a new 'Graduate' session for past participants.

Their programs are overnights that include all camping equipment. You just have to bring your own food, bedding and personal items. A bonus for those without wheels is this season's expanded Parkbus service leaving from downtown Toronto or Ottawa. Campers can take advantage of this transit service offering direct transportation to beautiful parks like Algonquin and Killarney.

Sleep in comfort and get off the ground:

Yurts are round tent-like abodes offering urban comforts such as electricity and furniture. They have become quite popular over the last few years in parks from Nova Scotia to British Columbia.

Exclusive to a couple of national parks in Alberta and Quebec, oTENTiks are a cross between an A-frame cabin and a prospector tent mounted on a raised wooden floor, making it warm, dry and cozy.

Plan in advance:

Whether or not a park requires advance reservations, it's worth making one to ensure you secure the days and spot you want.

Make a camping equipment checklist. I have a tattered and stained one from 1999 that I dig out annually. It will help you get organized. Parks Canada has a great checklist app you can download that includes safety tips, recipes and first timer advice. Don't panic if you don't own everything on the list.

Places like Mountain Equipment Co-op rent out big ticket items such as tents, sleeping bags and backpacks. For smaller items, consider borrowing from friends or better yet, invite them and their equipment along. Camping is more fun as a group anyway.

Phyllo is a wonderful way to wrap a vegetable and cheese dish like this.

Traditionally, you would use puff pastry, which is loaded with saturated fat and excess calories. Phyllo is a much healthier alternative and is available in the refrigerated section of your supermarket.

Working with phyllo is quite easy. Just remember to cover up those sheets you're not using at the time.

1. Preheat oven to 375 F and spray baking sheet with vegetable spray. In saucepan of boiling water or in microwave, cook asparagus for 3 minutes or until tender; drain and set aside.

2. In nonstick skillet over medium heat, add oil and cook garlic and red peppers for 5 minutes or until tender; add green onions and cook for 1

Ingredients

- 6 oz asparagus spears, trimmed
- 1 tsp oil
- 1 1/2 tsp minced garlic
- 1 1/2 cups chopped red peppers
- 1/4 cup chopped green onions
- 1/3 cup creamy ricotta cheese
- 3 oz goat cheese, crumbled
- 2 tbsp grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 egg
- 1/4 tsp coarsely grated pepper
- 5 sheets phyllo pastry
- 2 tsp margarine or butter, melted minute more. Remove from heat.

3. In bowl, combine cheeses, egg and pepper, until smooth.

4. Keeping remaining phyllo covered with a cloth to prevent drying out, layer two sheets of phyllo one on top of the other;

5. Layer two more sheets of phyllo on top; brush with melted margarine. Put last phyllo sheet on top.

6. Spread cheese mixture over-top. Add sweet pepper mixture, and place the asparagus spears on top.

7. Starting from the long edge where the filling is, roll the phyllo and filling, jelly roll fashion. Tuck the ends under and place on prepared baking sheet. Brush with remaining melted margarine and bake for 20 to 25 minutes, or until golden brown. Cut into slices and serve. ROSE REISMAN'S ENLIGHTENED HOME COOKING (ROBERT ROSE) BY ROSE REISMAN

Hearty side of vegetarian bites

1. Crepes: In blender, blend eggs, milk, flour, 2 tbsp (30 ml) of butter and salt until smooth. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour.

2. Heat 8-inch (20 cm) stick-resistant skillet over medium heat; brush lightly with some of remaining butter. Stir half the chives into batter. For each crepe, pour about 1/3 cup (75 ml) batter into centre of pan, swirling to coat; cook, turning once, until set and light golden, about 1 minute. Transfer to plate; repeat with remaining batter to make 12 crepes.

3. Filling: In large, wide saucepan, melt 1 tbsp (15 ml) butter over medium-high heat; sauté mushrooms, onion, garlic, half salt, and pepper until golden brown and liquid has evaporated, about 8 minutes. In 2 batches, add spinach, letting each batch wilt before adding next, and stirring often. Once all is wilted, continue to cook until almost no liquid remains, 5 to 8 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in rice.

4. In saucepan, melt remaining butter over medium heat; whisk in flour and cook, whisking often, until pale golden, about 2 minutes. Whisk in sherry, cooking 1 minute. Whisk in broth until smooth, then whisk in milk; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, whisking often, until smooth and thickened, about 5 minutes. Whisk in 1 cup (250 ml) of the cheese, the remaining salt and the nutmeg until smooth.

5. Stir 1 cup (250 ml) of the sauce into mushroom mix. Spread 1/2 cup (125 ml) of sauce in greased 13-x 9-inch (3 l) glass baking dish.

6. Preheat oven to 375 F (190 C). With one crepe at a time, spoon about 1/3 cup (75 ml) filling in line along centre of each crepe. Roll up and arrange snugly, seam side down and in single layer, in prepared dish. Drizzle sauce evenly otop. Sprinkle with remaining cheese and chives. - Be confident. The most important thing is confidence when you're travelling. It's perfectly natural to be nervous and apprehensive but you have to remember that the person who has sent you on this trip trusts that you can do the job you've been sent there to do.

As an experienced community specialist, my leadership team looked to me to take initiative and train the Cleveland team.

What did you have to get in order/prepare to ensure that your business trip went smoothly?

The first step was to plan flights, accommodations and budgets with my boss. This part was fairly stressful because I was worried about the cost of all of it and the idea of "expensing".

As a new grad, I still had some school debt, a lower salary and a low credit limit. This was concerning to me because without a company card I was expected to "take care" of everything myself and fill out expense reports for reimbursement. Communicating this to my boss also worried me because I thought he might think less of me. Fortunately he was very understanding and made appropriate arrangements so that the cost of the trip would not be an issue.

How were you successfully able to work well with a new and different team?

My role on this team, as a leader, was communicated with them well before I arrived. They were told to respect me as management even though I'm young.

This was helpful in establishing my position, but the rest just took knowledge of common leadership and teamwork skills. I find these fundamental and essential skills are universal when it comes to the workplace.

When travelling, is it important to stay in contact with your manager or boss daily to keep them up-to-date?

Every night I would Skype with my boss to debrief him of the day previous. This was very helpful because he gave me strategies to deal with any issues I might have and how to approach the coming day. It was also important to receive feedback from them about my performance while I was away.

What to do if you're a 22-22-22

What a difference digital makes.

Looking to the law as the new landscape of work takes shape

NIK FARJAM
TalentEgg.ca

Born between 1981 and 2000, the millions of Canadian members of Generation Y have accepted working hours and conditions that have coined a new catch phrase in the workplace — “22-22-22” — meaning a 22-year-old willing to work 22-hour days for $22,000 a year.

Although the exact figures may differ from workplace to workplace (especially the 22-hour workday), the trend for members of Generation Y is to work more hours, at different locations, through different means, and often for less money.

While these arrangements may help the 22-22-22 employee get a foothold in the workplace and gain experience in their chosen fields, there are important employment legal implications that should be addressed by both employees and employers. Here is a snapshot:

Health and safety in the workplace

The 22-22-22 arrangement may result in increased claims for benefits for fatigue, disability or psychological harm associated with working long hours, with little pay and little security.

For example, while volunteers and apprentices are not covered by the Employment Standards Act, 2000 (ESA) or the worker's compensation regime in Ontario, employers still have general responsibility for the health and safety of volunteers and apprentices, visiting or “helping out” in their workplaces under the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

Overtime and digital labour

The ESA sets limits to the number of hours employees can work, which the 22-22-22 employee (working the “22-hour” workday) easily surpasses, creating entitlement to overtime. With certain exceptions such

Constructive dismissal claim

If the employee (unwillingly) becomes a 22-22-22 employee over time, and it is through the employer's modification (or addition) of duties, the 22-22-22 employee may have grounds to refuse the additional work, and treat the employment contract as if it is at an end.

- Remedy for constructive dismissal (i.e., reasonable notice payment) exists only if the employer's actions significantly and qualitatively changes the employment relationship (i.e., substantial change(s) in pay, duties, hours).

This is a major step, and should not be taken lightly and without legal advice.

- With permanent employment becoming more elusive, 22-22-22 employment arrangements may be an acceptable option for many young employees. However, ignoring one's rights for a job, without at least having an awareness and/or conversation about one's legal entitlements and options, may not be the foundation on which to develop an entire career.

as doctors, lawyers, mushroom growers (seriously!), this entitlement cannot be bypassed by providing salaries or giving an employee the title of manager.

What may also add to the overtime claim of the 22-22-22 employee is the extent to which hours spent on emails, blogs, Facebook posts and tweets will constitute “work” for the purpose of compensation and overtime. It is not yet clear, unless it has been included in the employment contract, if social media work is compensable.

How to cope with the 22-22-22 arrangement

Clear employment contract

It is important to set out (either at the beginning of the relationship or through amendments) the framework for the employment relationship, with a particular emphasis on what is included and excluded (and not compensable) under the employment contract.

As a best practice, digital labour, and to what extent a 22-22-22 employee is responsible and compensated for it, should be addressed as part of the employment contract. With the reliance on digital devices, it may now be suitable to have this conversation when negotiating the terms of an employment contract.

Overtime pay

Unless exempted from overtime hour provisions under the ESA, employees should request payment for overtime hours or take advantage of time off in lieu of overtime pay. It is important to also keep in mind that an employer cannot intimidate, fire, suspend or otherwise punish a 22-22-22 employee if he or she refuses to work more than the maximum daily (eight hours) and weekly hours (48 hours) of work. If this happens, a 22-22-22 employee can file a complaint with the Ministry of Labour or seek legal advice with respect to their options.

Accommodation

Where the hours and demands of the job, coupled with obligations outside of work, are having an effect on psychological and physical well-being, the 22-22-22 employee may want to canvass the potential for accommodation (i.e., flex time; working from home, etc.).

Keep in mind, however, that accommodation requests should be based on a legitimate need rather than preferences, and may also require supporting documentation. If the request for accommodation is denied, seek out the reason(s), and determine if they are based on legitimate grounds. Keeping in mind that the accommodation process is a two-way street, which requires that the employer and employee work together, will allow this process to be more successful for both parties.

On meeting your first meeting head-on

Sit but don't quit.

Between conference calls and PowerPoint presentations, you may just pick up a few brownie points

GREAVES
TalentEgg.ca

One of the many new things you'll do when starting a new job is attend your very first meeting! Not a big deal right? Well sort of. In the grand scheme of things, it will more than likely not make or break your career. But it is something that you want to tackle properly.

Nobody enjoys sitting for hours on end, in a drab conference room, listening to person after person drone on about something nobody cares about anyway. Luckily, the trend in recent years has been to shorten meetings to make them more efficient, creative and collaborative.

Meetings have become less time consuming, increasingly more team oriented and in general more enjoyable, so they're more productive than ever. Employers understand the importance of facilitating an effective meeting not only for their employees, but the company as a whole.

So, how do you rock the socks off your first meeting, you might ask? Read on to learn how.

Prepare

This might seem obvious, but "prepare" doesn't mean showing up to the meeting ready to take pages of notes. Be ready to do that, but also think about getting enough sleep the night before to avoid being drowsy half way through, eating at the right time so your tummy doesn't start grumbling and being deeply aware of what the meeting will cover.

Here are a couple of other things to think about when preparing for your first meeting:

- Bring in a beverage with you to keep hydrated, such as coffee, tea, juice or water. This way if you get sleepy, hungry, or can't focus, you have something on hand to keep you attentive.
- Turn your cellphone off before the meetings starts.
- Be aware of your nervous habits and try to avoid doing them (i.e., tapping your pen on the table, tapping your feet, fidgeting, etc.)
- Have all of your materials prepared the day before to ensure you don't forget anything.

Be present

It's very important to show that you're not only physically present during the meeting, but mentally as well. You can do this by:

- Listening and taking notes as necessary. Try to keep all of your questions until the end when there will likely be a question period. Besides, your question might be answered along the way anyways.

Put your best face forward

Even simply nodding your head when someone makes a good point or smiling at a creative idea shows that you're invested and interested in the meeting.

Meghan Greaves

- Showing that you're interested. This shouldn't be difficult, but sometimes when we're nervous we tend to zone out, which to your fellow coworkers can come across as you're not interested. Even simply nodding your head when someone makes a good point or smiling at a creative idea shows that you're invested and interested in the meeting.

Participate

During your first meeting you likely won't need to say much (phew!). This doesn't mean you need to stay mute though. By communicating professionally (i.e., get your thoughts together before you speak), you can answer questions when addressed or make comments when appropriate. Remember, keep it short and sweet — don't ramble.

TALENTEGG.CA IS CANADA'S LEADING JOB SITE AND ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADUATES.

Put it in print. Unless a laptop has been approved for the meeting, take notes with a pen and paper. iSTOCK

The grand finale

To wrap up the meeting, the facilitator will likely do a summary of what was discussed, assign tasks and address any concerns. This is also your time to ask any questions you may have.

- Be smart and concise with your comments. "I was just wondering... you had mentioned the deadline for project X, just wondering if I was responsible for the entirety of the project. Or is anyone else going to be working on it with me? What's the deadline again?" — is not concise.

- Get your thoughts together to address your questions or concerns professionally. For example, "For project X, will I be working individually or collaboratively to have everything done by the deadline?"

Seamless transition from Serena to semis for Lisicki

Wimbledon. After upset win over defending champ, German moves quick in quarter-finals

If Sabine Lisicki had a letdown after defeating Serena Williams, it didn't show.

If Lisicki is penciling herself into the Wimbledon final, she isn't saying.

Showing no drop-off after her dramatic victory over Williams, the 23rd-seeded Lisicki returned Tuesday and made quick work of a much less intimidating opponent, 46th-ranked Kaia Kanepi, dispatching her 6-3, 6-3 in 65 minutes to advance to her second career Wimbledon semifinal.

"I was ready today," Lisicki said. "I knew from the past, out of experience, that I needed to make the switch quickly to be ready, and that's what I did."

Indeed, Lisicki opened the match by breaking Kanepi's serve in the first game and didn't look back in that set. In the second, she had one hiccup — a game in which she double-faulted three times to drop a break and fall behind 2-1. She broke back right away, however, and won four of the next five games to close out the match.

Elsewhere on Wednesday

The other women's semifinal will pit No. 15 Marion Bartoli of France against No. 20 Kirsten Flipkens of Belgium.

- Flipkens beat eighth-seeded Petra Kvitova 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 to knock the last remaining Grand Slam tournament winner out of the draw.

Now, the 23-year-old German finds herself in the Wimbledon semifinals for the second time in three years. Her win against Williams made her the new, odds-on favourite to win the title and even pushed Britain's favourite player, Andy Murray, off the back pages of a couple London tabloids.

All of which means almost nothing — at least to hear Lisicki tell it.

"Match by match," she said. "Did that from the start and will continue to do that."

Her next opponent is No. 4 Agnieszka Radwanska, who defeated No. 6 Li Na 7-6 (5), 4-6, 6-2 in a match that took more than 3 1/2 hours to complete and included two rain delays, an injury timeout and a final game that lasted more than 10 minutes. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Redemption on grass

"I never expected this to happen in my life."

Kirsten Flipkens, who upset former Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitova 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 to advance to the semifinals on Tuesday, Flipkens was diagnosed with life-threatening blood clots in both her legs in April 2012. As a result, she missed two months of competition and her ranking nosedived dramatically to No. 262.

Near perfection so far

Neither No. 1-seeded Novak Djokovic nor No. 2-seeded Andy Murray has lost a set heading into the Wimbledon quarter-finals.

- The way it's gone this fortnight, that's quite an accomplishment. Rafael Nadal, a 12-time Grand Slam winner, was beaten in the first round. Roger Federer, owner of a record 17 major titles, went out in the second round, as did four-time major champ Maria Sharapova.
- Djokovic faces Tomas Berdych Wednesday. Murray plays Fernando Verdasco.

Vincent Lecavalier boosted the value of this year's free-agent crop, but after the former Lightning centre was scooped up, it's unclear how much teams will sacrifice to add one of the remaining veterans. JARED WICKERHAM/GETTY IMAGES

Potential agents of change far from free

NHL. With Lecavalier signing, Flyers make first stab at veteran crop as GMs weigh benefits under tight salary cap

Vincent Lecavalier, Danny Briere and Ilya Bryzgalov have injected some more intrigue into NHL free agency.

So much so that Lecavalier kicked off the annual signing period Tuesday, three days before it officially began, by signing a multiyear contract with the Philadelphia Flyers.

The deal reflects the impact the addition of several veterans, who had their contracts bought out, have made in boosting interest in a free-agent crop that lacked star power a year after Ryan Suter and Zach Parise created a buzz by hitting the market.

Lecavalier was able to shop around early because he was bought out.

"The depth isn't what it has been in past year, but there are some very good players available," Nashville Predators general manager David Poile said in a telephone interview on Tuesday. "It's a different situation, though, with the lower cap so it'll be interesting to see what this crop of free agents gets both in terms of salary and years."

The NHL's salary cap will be $64.3 million for the 2013-14 season, a total significantly less than the $70.2 million in contracts teams could have on the books during the lockout-delayed season.

Lecavalier became unexpectedly available after the Tampa Bay Lightning bought out the contract of their 33-year-old captain last week. The Flyers did the same by cutting ties with Briere, a 35-year-old forward, and Bryzgalov, a 33-year-old goaltender.

"It's great to have players out there," Detroit Red Wings coach Mike Babcock said, "but you have to have money to spend."

With Lecavalier now off the market, Briere and Bryzgalov come into full focus. For now, though, their former team — Philadelphia — has secured the most marketable player out there.

The Dallas Stars were interested in Lecavalier, as well, but as general manager Jim Nill had indicated: "So are probably 28 other teams. It'll come down to money and fit."

Briere's agent, Pat Brisson, said about 15 teams already contacted him to express an interest and his client is looking forward to a fresh start with a Stanley Cup contender.

"He still has a lot in his tank," Brisson said.

Veteran role players

The best of the rest

NHL free agency won't be limited to the trio of accomplished veterans who were bought out, and will include notable names such as forwards Nathan Horton, Mike Ribeiro, Jaromir Jagr, Teemu Selanne, Jarome Iginla, Patrik Elias, David Clarkson and Pascal Dupuis unless any of them signed with their old teams after press time Tuesday.

"It's rare to find a star in his prime in free agency..." Red Wings GM Ken Holland said. "But there are some secondary players and some past-their-prime guys that are battling father time that can help you."

Mandela Sports Day a celebration of beloved leader

South Africa's national football and rugby teams will play on the same day at the former World Cup showpiece stadium in Soweto to honour Nelson Mandela, bringing together in a rare move the country's two most popular sports that once portrayed its deep racial divisions.

The South African sports ministry said on Tuesday that the Nelson Mandela Sports Day on Aug. 17 at FNB Stadium — formerly Soccer City — was aimed at uniting the country and the world "in celebration and promotion" of the anti-apartheid leader's legacy, as South Africans continued to long for the critically ill former president to recover.

While calling the sports day a celebration of Mandela, the ministry referred to the sombre current mood in South Africa, with its inspiring and beloved national hero, now 94, still in a critical but stable condition after 25 days in the hospital.

Murder investigation. Ex-Pat Aaron Hernandez linked to 2012 homicide

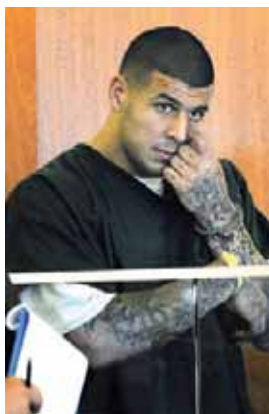

Boston police have asked authorities in the Connecticut hometown of Aaron Hernandez for their help with an investigation into a double homicide connected to the former NFL star, police said Tuesday.

Hernandez is already charged with murder in the shooting death of Odin Lloyd, whose body was found June 17 near Hernandez's home in North Attleborough, Mass.

The request from Boston police in the July 2012 double homicide was based on evidence developed through the investigation of Lloyd's slaying, Bristol Police Lt. Kevin Morrell said. He said police were asked to search the same home in Bristol for both investigations, and a vehicle was seized at the address on Friday.

Two people were killed in the shooting in Boston's south end on July 15, 2012. Witnesses reported seeing people inside a grey SUV with Rhode Island plates open fire on a vehicle carrying the victims, 29-year-old Daniel Jorge Correia de Abreu and 28-year-old Saffro Teixeira Furtado.

Boston police have declined to comment on whether er Hernandez is being looked at as a possible suspect in that case.

Prosecutors say Hernandez, 23, orchestrated Lloyd's execution-style slaying. They say it happened after the two went to a nightclub days earlier and Lloyd spoke to people Hernandez didn't want him talking to. Two other men are also facing charges in connection with Lloyd's death.

The 2014 Ford Fiesta

Review. With three options to choose from let's get the party started

Well, your job just got a little tougher. It's not because the 2014 Ford Fiesta looks better, which it does, it's because this sub-compact sedan/hatchback now includes a thrifty turbo option as well as a hot hatchback with close to 200 horsepower. Decisions, decisions.

Since its 2011-model-year launch, the European-designed, Mexico-built Fiesta, along with its Focus counterpart, has given Ford ample small-car credibility in North America. The four-door sedan — a model created specifically for this continent — offers great looks, but the more youthful hatchback is the one that garners the most attention and is arguably the most practical in terms of passenger and stowage space.

From the nose on back, the Fiesta remains pretty much unchanged. As with most sub-compacts, the car is narrow at the waist and a tight fit for adult-size rear-seat riders. But the interior is also an exercise in good taste, with ergonomic switches and controls and quality seat coverings and door panels, especially on up-level models. While the split rear seat doesn't fold flush with the floor, it's sufficiently flat to give you at least double the capacity compared to the sedan's quite spacious trunk,

  - Engines (hp). 1.6-litre DOHC I4 (120); 1.0-litre DOHC I3, turbocharged (123); 1.6-litre DOHC I4, turbocharged (197)

Design

Ford's stylists have done a major number on the front bodywork. The result is a proboscis that pays tribute to the 2013 Ford Fusion sedan. The open-mouth grille really seems to suit the car and is a significant improvement over the tiny air inlet on the 2013 version.

Transmission

Fiesta's base 1.6-litre four-cylinder engine that produces 120 (hp) and 112 pound-feet of torque. It hooks to a five-speed manual transmission, or optional six-speed automated manual that does away with the torque converter found in conventional automatics. It shifts all by itself, or manually. It's your call.

Technology

The Fiesta was given an improved "Sync" communications/infotainment system with upgraded voice command software, more workable hands-free Bluetooth short-range wireless connectivity and an easier-to-use optional navigation system.

even though the hatchback is 33 centimetres shorter.

The base 1.6-litre engine will be joined by an optional 1.0-litre (999 cubic-centimetres, to be precise) three-cylinder powerplant later in the model year. But don't let the diminutive size fool you. This engine is a member of Ford's turbocharged EcoBoost lineup, which has become well-known for extracting maximum power and fuel economy from minimal displacement. In the Fiesta's case, the tiny 1.0 puts out 123 horsepower and, more importantly, 148 pound-feet of torque.

At this point Ford is being coy concerning the littlest turbo's fuel numbers, other than to state that its highway rating will best the base 1.6's 4.9 l/100 km figure. At the opposite end of the spectrum, the new Fiesta ST model promises a lively driving experience for the serious enthusiast. Its turbocharged 1.6-litre engine, which is also available in the Fusion, delivers 197 horsepower and 202 pound-feet of torque.

As with the Focus ST, pro-

The Fiesta's neat dash proves that design detail doesn't cost any more to execute.

iciency in using a six-speed manual gearbox is a must since it's the only transmission available. Other ST components include a blacked-out honeycomb grille, unique 17-inch wheels (15-inch wheels are standard) and rear spoiler, quicker-ratio steering, larger brakes and a sport-tuned suspension. On the inside, heated sport-style cloth bucket seats are standard, but you can upgrade to Recaro-brand front buckets with leather inserts.

To ensure everyone aboard is aware that all 197 horses are working at full gallop, the ST's engine sounds are actually piped into the cabin using what's called a "Sound Symposer." The ST is on-the-road-priced at about $26,500, but add another $2,500 or so for the Recaro seat option. That's about $10,800 above the price of a basic Fiesta S sedan, but that should be considered pretty reasonable for a sports hatchback possessing that level of power.

Along with the high-strutting ST, the fun-injected Fiesta lineup for 2014 continues to party on for frugal small-car lovers.
